FOREWORD

THE Great Macaulay, in his History of England, lamented that he could not find the likenesses of many of the men of whom he wrote. That the picture, to one who saw it understandingly, was supplemental to, and even more informing than the written word. That the lines of stress and toil, the furrows of mental concentration, the broad, intellectual brow, and the clear, bright eye, tell, as no written record can tell us, that it is no sluggard nor weakling who is portrayed, but a clean cut man of battle. For truly, the warrior does not always wear a sword.

The printed word may err. The face of the man is nature's record, stamped where all may read. To the student of physiognomy, not only does the face tell the man, but environment and mentality, changing from generation to generation, stamp the spirit of the time on the countenances of the men of that period. Compare the likenesses of men of five generations since with the pictures of men of ten generations ago, and there will be observed a distinct difference of type, compare these with men of today and there is a distinct difference from either of the other two.

Fifty or even forty years ago, before the evolution of the processes of modern engraving, a work of the scope and magnitude of this volume was impossible. Engravings were then made wholly by hand, a tedious, laborious, and expensive process, the plates varying with the skill and artistic ability of each individual workman. There were not enough skilled craftsmen in the world to produce in an ordinary lifetime the number of dies included in this volume.

Again, plates produced, as modern engravings are made, largely by photography on sensitized metal, from a photograph which is itself an absolute reproduction, and cannot vary from the original, have a uniformity and truthfulness impossible to the unaided human hand.

This book embraces within its covers the largest and most comprehensive collection of portraits ever published in one single volume in the world.

The subjects have been chosen in the very broadest sense. They are those, who wherever born or reared, in business or connections, in social life or in politics, are parts of the fabric of the great Empire State.

The uses of this work are many. It will be of constant use and reference in newspaper offices and in Libraries, in homes and in places of business.

The photographs themselves are examples of high class work, and include productions from the Studios of J. G. Gessford, a photographic artist of the first rank; George Prince, formerly of Washington, who has personally posed and photographed every President of the United States from Andrew Johnson to Woodrow Wilson, Pirie MacDonald, Marceau, Sarony, Pach Bros., Stein, White, Davis & Sanford, Lippincott, Campbell Studios, Alman & Co., Aimé Dupont, Underwood & Underwood, and the Lifshey Galleries of Brooklyn.

The publisher is especially indebted, for able and loyal guidance, through many pitfalls and bitter assaults, to his counsel, Mr. Bernard Robinson and Mr. Joseph E. Lauber, of the law firm of Robinson & Lauber, who not only wisely and vigorously defended him, but cheered the darkest day with a warm spirit of personal friendliness and kindliness, which can never be fully appreciated nor forgotten.

THE MAKERS OF THE BOOK

AS simple as it seems to the uninitiated, this volume represents the unremitting labor for a long period of time of more than a score of people. The printing was done by Messrs. Neumann Brothers, "The Linguistic Printers," and it would tax the best capacity of any printing house to equal it. The publisher deems it fitting here to acknowledge the able assistance and advice of Mr. Henry Snyder Reed, and regrets that he was unable to obtain in time to grace the ensuing pages, the photographs of Miss Mary Louise Clarke, whose able and conscientious supervision of the earlier stages of the work laid the foundation on which the superstructure was built; Miss Helen Dorothy Berry, whose careful attention to office details was of great value, and Mr. William Clement Leonard, whose systemization of office methods along the lines of modern efficiency standards was of much help to the selling organization.
